

Mural: Julian Hume, A scene depicting the extinct fauna of Rodrigues Island overlooking Canyon Tiye!

PALAEONTOLOGICAL ART WORKSHOPS
3-DAY WORKSHOPS for artists

This is a rare, hands-on opportunity open to artists at any skill level, especially those who want to tell an important story about nature through their work, to have one of David Attenborough's "go to" experts from London's Natural History Museum, artist and palaeontologist Julian Hume, share his skills with you and introduce you to reference material, history and the latest techniques and materials used by palaeontological artists internationally. Over three days in the field, lab and studio, learn to reconstruct and paint a picture of how extinct animals looked in their natural settings. Learn more about Julian's work here.

Workshop Dates and Places:

NARACOORTE CAVES, May 19, 20, 21

CALPERUM STATION and THE McCORMICK CENTRE FOR THE ENVIRONMENT, RENMARK,
June 9, 10, 11

Cost $110 per workshop. Places are limited!

To register and for more information on Julian Hume's workshops, open studios, public talks, and accommodation packages, please contact Alexandra Randell 0456 531 622 alex@alt.org.au

Photo Credit: GEORGIE SHARP/Flickr

Caves – roosts for owls in the Murray Darling Basin and pitfalls for megafauna in the South East of South Australia, bore silent witness to extinction when, in the darkness, the last animals of their species took their final breaths and closed their eyes forever. If they could come back before our eyes, what would we see? Palaeontological artist, Julian Hume, pictures it for us lest we forget the place these animals had in our landscapes or forget to treasure our remnant wildlife.

See more examples of how Julian's work is helping deliver some incredible documentaries with Sir David Attenborough below:

<http://www.nhm.ac.uk/press-office/press-releases/enjoy-a-one-on-one-audience-with-david-attenborough-at-the-natur.html>

<https://www.all-about-london.com/2013/12/attenborough-brings-museum-specimens-to.html>

OPEN STUDIOS: Dates and venues (free admission)

Naracoorte Caves, Naracoorte SA

May 17, 18, 23 & 24 (open 9.30 am – 4.30 pm)

Riverland Artists' Hub, Renmark Square, Renmark SA

May 30 – June 8 (open 10.00 am – 5.00 pm)

